FLEET, HANTS:

PRINTED & PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHOR
SINGLEHANDED, AT HIS GENEALOGICAL OFFICE IN KING'S ROAD.

1918

HE first edition of this work, which appeared in parts under the title of Faclair Gàidhlig le dealbhan, and the nom-de-plume of "Ewen MacDonald" being now out of print, the necessity has arisen for a new edition. The one I now present to the public will, I trust, be found of equal service both to beginners and advanced students of the language. The first edition of the work has been carefully revised and no expense or labour spared to make this the most reliable and complete Gaelic Dictionary obtainable.

The work was originally undertaken solely for my own private use, but after continual urging by other Gaelic students who had seen it, and proved its utility by experience, I at last consented to print it and so make the result of my labours accessible to all.

The vocabulary is based on that of MacLeod & Dewar, so much appreciated by Gaelic students, and where the orthography of that work differs from MacBain's Gaelic Dictionary that of the latter has been generally adopted All the words not given by MacLeod & Dewar, but appearing in any of the other Gaelic Dictionaries are now included besides some thousands of words gathered from Common Speech and the whole range of Modern Scottish Gaelic Literature, including the Gaelic names of Plants, Diseases and Birds, Technical Terms, &c., compiled from lists given in pamphlets and periodicals from time to time. All the examples of idiomatic phrases and proverbs given by MacAlpine have been retained, as well as Armstrong's, where not practically the same, and many from Nicolson's Gaelie Proverbs have been added, with large numbers from various other sources, Local words and provincialisms from Common speech, &c., many never printed before.

My thanks are chiefly due to his Most Gracious Majesty the late King Edward, for graciously awarding me a Civil List Pension when only about one half of the Dictionary had been issued to the public, and his Majesty's lamentable death is one of the dark shadows that mars my pleasure at the completion of my life-work. by preventing the possibility of my offering a copy for his acceptance. The great expense entailed by the publication of a book of this magnitude singlehanded, is a constant and heavy drain on the income of anyone of small means, and were it not for the receipt of this pension when it was awarded, the continuation of the publication beyond page 600 would have been, at least for many years, an absolute impossibility. Before proceeding any farther, I should have had to execute enough remunerative work to enable me to purchase the necessary materials to continue the Dictionary as well as to live upon, an exceedingly hard task after the struggles I had already gone through, and one which would have no doubt eventually ended in the abandonment of the publication in an unfinished state. Owing to unfortunate investments I had already had to earn all the money to purchase the necessary materials to produce this book as well as much of my living for some years by doing any printing I could get; but the strain on brain and eyesight entailed by thus always working at the highest pressure and for exceptionally long hours, so that the Dictionary might be completed as quickly as possible, could not have been continued much longer.

I have much pleasure in acknowledging the great help given by my correspondents in all parts of the world, both by sending numbers of words that were new to me and by obtaining many subscribers to the work. I am also indebted to my wife for revising proofs, assisting in folding sheets, and preparing parts for post, as well as for advising many translations. cess of the work is in no small measure due to her assistance in household matters, and by keeping down domestic expenses making money available for its production that would have otherwise been spent in an unproductive way. The following gentlemen have kindly assisted by following the work during its progress through the press, and it is largely due to their suggestions and additions that the compilation of such a full and accurate vocabulary of Scottish Gaelic has been possible.

Malcolm Macfarlane, Elderslie, Johnstone. Rev. Charles M. Robertson, Craighouse, Jura.

Henry Whyte, "Fionn," Glasgow. Rev. J. MacRury, Snizort, Skye. Wm. Cameron, Poolewe, Ross-shire.

A. Henderson, Kilmory, Kilchoan.

J. G. MacKay, London.

Donald MacKenzie, late I. R., Killimster, Wick.

Malcolm MacDonald, Stornoway.

Rev. D. Campbell, M.A. PH.D., Bunachton, Dores.

Rev. Malcolm MacLeod, M.A. Broadford, Skye.

Donald Murray, Aberdeen.

David Urquhart, M.A., Kyle, Lochalsh. Rev. D. M. Cameron, Ledaig, Argyll.

Rev. D. Munro, Ferintosh, Ross-shire.

Rev. C. M. Robertson and Mr. Henry Whyte have have also assisted me considerably with Proper Names and Technical Terms.

I am particularly indebted to Dr. W. J. Watson for kindly revising and adding to the list of Gaelic Proper Names which I have been collecting for a period of thirty This is the first general list of the kind published for all Scotland. I must not omit my great obligation to the Press both at home and abroad, for the detailed reviews they have given of the parts as they appeared, and for their hearty appreciation of my labours.

The Highland Society of London kindly contributed £25 towards the cost of publication.

No one who has always spoken a language like Gaelic from the cradle can ever realize the extraordinary difficulties presented to a stranger who wishes to acquire First, the majority of Gaelic speakers only a very few years ago could neither read nor write it, so when one heard an unfamiliar word or phrase and the first instinct was of course to write it down lest it should be forgotten, the question was how to spell it-of course the speaker could not tell! I was baulked in this way times without number, and my progress with the language immensely retarded in consequence. Next, the great difficulty of inducing a Gael to engage in a Gaelic conversation if he thinks he can make himself understood at all by means of indifferent English, or even if there is anyone present who cannot understand Gaelic, makes the acquisition of a knowledge of colloquial Gaelic much more difficult than is the case with other modern tongues, for it is only by posing as a Highlander and one who knows Gaelic that one can ever hope to hear it spoken habitually and without restraint. These are real difficulties, but they may be overcome by scheming and perseverance as I have proved.

This Dictionary is of especial value to the beginner. Many who did not learn the language in infancy, but acquired it in later life through the medium of books, have notified me of the difficulties of grammar and idiom they met with. Such difficulties are likely to puzzle other novices, and have therefore been explained under their appropriate headings. Grammatical difficulties have been elucidated by good Gaelic scholars, and no labour has been spared to make the work as complete and reliable as possible. Some have found fault with my explanations here and there as being too full but I have always purposely inclined to being too explicit rather than too vague, because while one reader may be far beyond any assistance a certain explanation gives, the next may find in it an elucidation of a difficulty that he has been trying to get explained for months. This has been brought home vividly to me by some of my proof-readers making such remarks as, "unnecessary," "self-evident," &c. beside explanations I have given of difficulties that had puzzled me considerably when a beginner, and the full understanding of which I had imperceptibly acquired as I attained increased fluency in speaking the language.

Some scholars object to some of the words given in other Dictionaries as being Irish and not Scottish Gaelic, but many of these so-called Irish words are in daily use in Cantyre and appear in the Scottish Gaelic Bible, and the close similarity the Gaelic speech of the West of Scotland has to that of the North of Ireland (much closer than the native English of places not farther removed from one another and with no sea between them) makes the interchange of words easy and often convenient. Many of those who condemn the use of what they call "Irish" words, have no scruple in introducing English and Doric words, which they try to pronounce and write according to Gaelic rules, apparently to make their identity somewhat obscure, when there are already two or three native Gaelic words much more to the point.

A few correspondents have complained that the work is too crowded, in places, with obsolete or English words, but only those given in other Gaelic Dictionaries figure here, although more prominence has been given to the character of Anglicisms. Words marked obsolete in some Dictionaries, may often have been obsolete for a long period in the districts in which the compilers of those

The usual rule hitherto adopted in Gaelic Dictionaries with regard to English words in Gaelic dress has been—clarc, s.m. A clerk.

Sometimes Eng. or Eng. word is added, but not often. A new system has been adopted here, and all such words have been inserted thus—clare, s.m. Gaelic spelling of clerk.

This is the first Dictionary of the Gaelic language in which an attempt has been made to explain words by means of diagrams, and the first in which especial care has been taken in collecting localisms, the names of old Highland implements, &c., and their parts, many of which are now only to be found in one or two remote parishes of the Western Isles, from which they are fast disappearing. The lists of technical terms here given have never been published before, and the whole of the illustrations, with one or two exceptions, have been specially drawn for the work.

It is a cause of regret that type of a larger size could not have been used, but, owing to the great increase that would have caused in the bulk of the book, it was found to be impossible.

No attempt has been made to give a so-called phonetic spelling of each word as MacAlpine does. The orthodox spelling of the Gaelic language being practically phonetic on its own lines, by far the simplest way is to learn the correct sounds of the various Gaelic combinations of letters from some good text-book, of which there are many, and if possible, with the aid of a native Gaelic speaker.

Readers must use their own discretion in practising some of the forms given when translating from English into Gaelic. Many of the words which have here been added to MacLeod & Dewar's vocabulary are localisms and the persons or books from whom they were obtained being nearly always indicated by signs or initials, the districts in which they may be met with are easily found. Some such meanings while easily understood in one place, might be quite unintelligible even in another part of the same county. The name of a place given after any word or sentence signifies that it has been heard there, but its use may not be confined to that particular locality. Where dialectic quotations from common speech or books are given the dialectic form of spelling is usually retained. The past participles of verbs are spelt in the Dictionaries according to the old Gaelic rule, "leathann ri leathann," but there is a tendency among Gaelic writers at present to violate that rule and spell phonetically, as spadte for spadta, &c. Irregular forms of infinitives or present participles are not generally given by other Dictionaries under their roots, so they cannot be found unless you already know them. They are given here both under the roots and in their own places.

Every effort has been made to get the work finished as quickly as possible compatible with correct work and in consequence I worked long hours on many days when really too ill to do any work at all. The unique obstacles encountered in acquiring a fluent knowledge of Gaelic and compiling this Dictionary, as well as the difficulty in not being able to pay the heavy expense of having it printed and published in the ordinary way and so being finally compelled to learn how to print and publish it myself, have been fully described by the Press from time to time and an epitome of these accounts will be found in my History of the Dwelly family. I have set up every letter of the type myself from beginning to end, and the only assistance I have had in connection with the printing of this book has been the occasional distribution of type by members of my family amounting to nearly 40 pages and by others 10 pages—in all under 50 pages.

The Gaelic Language.

PRONUNCIATION.

HE Gaelic Alphabet contains eighteen letters—a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, l, m, n, o, p, r, s, t, u.

The vowels are divided into broad and small. The broad are a, o, and u; the small e, and i.
The Consonants are classed as—dentals d, t, s; labials b, f, m, p; linguals l, n, r; palatals

H is the mark of aspiration and is never found alone in a word, but always after the letters b, c, d, f, g, m, p, s, t. There are two accents—the grave and acute. There are two accents—the grave and acute. Either of these placed over a vowel indicates that it is long, and that it has a specific sound according to which is used. The accents also serve to distinguish between words that are the same in spelling but different in meaning. In almost all polysyllables, excepting some words compounded with a preposition, the accent falls on the first syllable. The citiers are short and unaccented, and the yowels in that signation have in general short obscure sounds. Hence it happens that the yowels in these

Hence it happens that the vowels in these syl bles are so often used indiscriminately.

There are no quiescent final rewels.

There are some sounds in Gaelic to which there are none perfectly similar i Linglish, and the same combinatio does not invariably represent the same sound in different parts of the Highlands. The powers of the different letters has be explained with a certain degree of accuracy, yet much will still remain to be learned by the control of the same of the curacy, yet much will still remain to be learned by the ear alone. As this subject is fully discussed and explained in "Gashic as a Specific Subject" we must refer the reader to that work for fuller information on account of our limited space here. The following remarks are however, reproduced, chicaly from "Combrai thean as Goldblig is an Eventa," by Rev. D. Mackines, as giving a good general idea of Gashic pronoutiation to those quite unacquainted with the language.

language.
Further remarks on productiation will be found in the body of this work under the respective letters.

> TRIPHTHONGS. SOUNDS OF THE

The Triphthongs are aci, eai, soi. iai, iui, uai. As the sounds of the diphthongs depend on those of the dual vowels, so the sounds of the triphthongs depend on those of the diphthongs. The rule that the vowel immediately before or immediately after a plain palatal or li gual ofte loses its sound holds good in regard to the triphthongs. The vowel in the triphthong that loses its sound is the last i.

SOUNDS OF THE CONSONANTS.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

The chief exceptions to the above rules frequently met with in writing are :-

is, is; so, this; sud, yonder; ged, although; and tigh, a house.

We have continued the usual way of spelling is and ged throughout this work, but there is an increasing tendency to spell "so" see, "sud" sied, and "tigh" taigh, so we have adopted these forms as being more in uniformity with the spelling of the rest of the language. See and sied are also the more correct as representing the Old Gaelic forms seo a.d siwt.

The Orthography generally adopted in 'his Dic-tionary is that used by the best scholars of the present day.

The Infinitive Mood and Pres. Part. are generformed by adding adh to the root, as-il. strike, a bhualadh to strike; a' bual-Bnail. strile, ad., striking.

OF SUBSTANTIVES.

In this Dictionary the noun is given in the Nom. Sing., immediately followed by the terminations of the Gen. Sing. and Nom. Plur. All irregular inflections of other cases are also given. When only one termination, a or an, is given, it is that of the Nom. Plur., and the Gen. Sing. is in such cases the same as the Nom, Sing. When the only termination given is not a or an, it is that of the Gen. Sing. and Nom. Plur., which in such cases are alike.

General Rules.—The Nom. and Dat. Sing. of Masc. Nouns are alike.

The Gen. and Dat. Sing. of Fem. Nouns are The Gen. and Vec. Sing. of Masc. Nouns are alike. file Nom. and Voc. Sing. of Fem. Nouns are alike. PLUR L.-The Nom. Plur. is often like the Gen. Sing., or it is formed by adding a, an, or can to the Nom. Sing.

The Gan. Pl. is either like the Nom. Sing. or

Nom. Plur.

The Dat. Pl. is like the Nom. Pl., the older form in shi or aith being practically obsolete. The Voc. Pl. is the same as the Nom., aspirated and ending in a or an.

A noun with the article before it is definite, and without the article, indefinite.

A definite masc, noun aspirates the Gen. and Dat. Sing; but a definite fem. noun aspirates the Nom. and Dat. Sing. A definite noun beginning with d, l, n, r, s, or t, does not aspirate any case.

Nouns beginning with a consonant, and whose last vowel is broad.

The Gen. Sing. is usually formed by inserting i after the last vowel of the Nom. Sing.

Nouns beginning with a consonant, and whose last vowel is small.

The Gen. Sing. masc. and fem. is generally formed by adding e to the Nom.; but Nouns of more than one syllable generally terminate alike in all cases in the Singular.

Nouns commencing with a vowel.

A definite masc. Noun requires t- efore it in the Nom. Sing., and h- in the Nom. and Das Pl.

A definite fem. Noun requires h- before it in the Gen. Sing., and in the Nom. and Dat. Plur.

A definite mase. Noun beginning with s followed by a vowel, or a liquid requires the before it in the Gen. and Dat. Sing., and a definite tem. Noun in the Nom. and Dat. Sing.

OF ADJECTIVES.

In this Dictionary Adjectives are given in the Positive form, followed by the termination of the first Comparative.

Adjectives are declined by number, gender, case, and form, and their oblique cases are formed from the Nom, according to the rules already given for the formation of the cases of nouns.

The Nom. Sing. Masc. and Fem. end alike, but the feminine is aspirated.

The Gen. Sing. Fem. is formed from the Gen.

Sing. Masc., by dropping the aspirated form, and, if a monosyllable, it generally ends in eor a. The Plural of all adjectives of one syllable ends in a (e if the preceding vowel is small) and of those of more than one syllable, like the Nom. Sing.

The Nom. Dat. and Voc. Fem., and the Gen. and Voc. Masc. are aspirated in the Sing. either with or without the article.

The Dat, of an adjective combined with a definite noun is aspirated in both genders.

Adjectives of two or more syllables seldom add c to the Gen. Sing.

An adjective beginning with a vowel admits of no initial change, and one ending in a vowel admits of no final change.

COMPARISON.—There are only two degrees of comparison in Gaelic, the Positive, and Comparative, and a Superlative of extent.

The Comparative has three forms of Comparison, the first, second, and third. The first form is like the Gen. Sing, Fem., the second is formed from the first by changing e into id, and the third from the second by changing id into ead; as—Ban, fair, 1stC.baine, 2ndC.bainid, 3rdC. and Abst. Noun, bainead, whiteness
Crion, little, 1stC.crine, 2ndC.crinid, 3rdC.crinead, bittleness.

The three forms of comparison take the aspirated form, but no final change whatever.

COMPOUND NOUNS.

When two Nouns combine to form a compound Noun the first is declined regularly. The second has the Genitive form always and in all the cases. It may be Singular or Plural. If it is Singular, it takes the Aspiration of an Adjective in agreement with the first Noun, if Plural it takes the Aspirate throughout.

Singular. a full tide Nom. làn-mara Gen. làin-mhara Dat. làn-mara a hen-house taigh-chearc coille-chnd taigh-chearc coille-chuò taigh-chearc coille-chud Voc. a làin-mhara, a thaigh-chearc, a choille-chnò

When a Noun and Adjective combine to form a Compound Noun both parts are regularly declined as if they stood apart.

Coileach-dubh, a black-cock. Plural. Singular. coilich-dhubha Nom: coileach-dubh Gen. coilich-dhuibh coileach-dubha coileach-dubh coilich dhubha a choilich-dhuibh a choileacha-dubha

Final n and l of the first element prevents aspiration of initial dental of the second—aig sgoil-dannsaidh, at a dancing-school.

When an Adjective and Noun combine, the Adjective retains the Nominative form throughout, and the Noun is regularly declined and nasthe aspiration throughout.

Dubh-fhacal, Singular, dubh-fhacal a dark saying Plural. dubh-fhacail Nom. Gen. dubh-fhacail dubh-fhacal Dat. dubh-fhacal dubh-fhacail Voc. a dhubh-fhacail a dhubh-fhacla air, prep. On, upon. 2 Of, concerning. 3 For, on account of. 4 By. 5 With. 6 Also signifying the same as if joined in its first sense with the pers. pronoun e. 7 On, an oath or assertion. 8 On, upon, denoting time. 9 With, accompanied by. 10 Claim of debt.

The above are the meanings of air used as a simple preposition, but it has idiomatic uses almost without number in various combination with verbs and other parts of speech.

Na'm faighinn am fear a tha air chall oirbh, if I should find the man that is lost PROM you [if translated here BY you, it implies that 'you' lost the man, which may not be true] theich e orm, he fled AWAY FROM me; chluich e an cleas orm, he played the trick on me: cheil e an gnothach orm, he hid the matter FROM me; grair e orm, he laughed at me; ni mi sgeul ort, I will make a tale (inform) AGAINST you; th'ith e ar n-iasg oirnn, he ate our fish for (ON) us, [i.e. in spite of us, not to oblige us.]
In these examples air translates differently into English in every case, but the differences are caused by the English verbs, each of which requires its own preposition as a complement. Classing these under the various meanings would hide from the learner the fact that the Gaelic prep. has the same mean-ing in each case—adversity, adverse circum-stances, mishap, disaster, trickery suffered, &c.

Examples given by MacAlpine: Iomradh air do guliocas, a report of thy wis-Iomradh air do guliocas, a report of thy mis-dom; air beinn, on a mountain; air sgàth, for the sake of; air ainm, by name; air bheagan, possessing little; air an aobhar sin, for that reason; air mo shon-sa dheth, for my part, as far as I am concerned; air éigin, with much ado, [with much difficulty, scarcely, hardly]; air a h-aon, for one, [thuit tri le Bran air a h-aon, Bran, for one, killed three]; air seachran, astray; air falbh, away, from home; air uair-ibh, sometimes; tha eagal air, he is afraid; tha acras air, he is hungry; air chor, so that; air chor éigin, some person or other; air meud 's gu bheil e, let it be ever so great; [air a mheud 's gu'n tig dhùubh, however many of them come]; gu'n tig dhiubh, however many of them come; cha d'fhuair mi ni air, I got nothing for it; dè tha a' cur air? what is the matter with him?

Slowly. a muin, he had carnal connection with her; air ball, adv. Immediately, on the spot.

bithidh sin air bhuil, that will come to pass. Addition l

Adulton t:

'Nuair a thig air duine thig air uile, this means that fortunes and misfortunes do not come singly, and is a Gaelic equivalent of it meer rains but it pours; tha a' mhisg air, he is drunk; cha'n 'eil air ach—, there is nothing for it but—. Chaidh e air chéilidh orra, he went to visit them; air tòrradh, at a funeral; air banais, at a wedding; air a lughad is fheàird, the smaller the better; bha e air mo mhuin gu'n &c., or bha e air m'aodann gu'n influing in acc., or one ear maddann gu'n dec, he was always worrying me to dec, gabh air, thrash him; éirich air, belabour him; éir-rich air an oran, sing the song well; mor orm agus beag agam, very patronizing to me and little thought or by me.

Sair, it may be stated, always signifies something of a very temporary duration.

[Air governs the Dative case of nouns following it. Though it is said not to cause aspira-tion by rule, there are many instances in set phrases in which it does, as, air dheireadh, be-hind; air thoiseach, before; air chionn, in rea-diness for, [air chionn dhomh bhi deas, by the time I was ready. It may be observed that where it causes aspiration it cannot be translated upon,—tha i air chall, she is lost. The reason for this difference seems to be that air in Modern Gaelic misrepresents the old prepositions are and for presents the old prepositions ar and for. Ar meant before, against, beside, and it caused aspiration of the word following, because it formerly ended in a vowel (are or ari.) For meant upon, and did not cause aspiration. This for is the air proper of Modern Gaelic grammar. 1]

Examples given above in brackets, thus [ ] are additions to those given by the authors mentioned.

Soothsayers. The aois-dana were in high esteem throughout the Highlands. So late as the end of the 1/th. entury they sat in the sreath or circle among the nobies and chiefs of families. They took the preference of the ollamh or doctor in medicine. After the extinction of the Druids, they were brought in to preserve the genealogy of families, and to repeat genealogical traditions at the succession of every chieftain. They had great in-fluence over all the powerful men of their time. Their persons, their bouses, their villages, were sacred. Whatever they asked was given them; not always, however, out of respect, but from fear of their satire, which frequently followed a denial of their requests. They lost by degrees, through their own in-They lost by degrees, brough their own in-solence and importunity, all the respect which their order had so long enjoyed, and privileges. Martin says "They shut their door and windows for a day's time, and lay on their backs in daybases, with a stone and on their backs in darkness with a stone upon their belly, and plands about their heads and eyes, and thus they purpped their brains for

1. In adding the suffix te, the rule that consonants must come between vowe s of the same class is not in every case regarded, because in speech it is not conformed to. In the case of Verbs of one syllable ending in t, n, r, o, n, and all those of more than one syllable, the letter iis introduced before the final consonant to make the spelling accord with the pronunciation. It is left out in other cases for the same reason.

s.m. Bard, rhymer, poet. Sheinn am bàrd, the bard sang. [**Poetry being in the opinion of the warlike Celts, the likeliest method of perpetuating their barery, the bards were held by them in the highest vene. ration. Princes and warriors did not disdain to caim affinity with them. The Ceits, being passionately fond of poetry, would listen to no instructio., whether from priest or philosopher, unless it were conveyed in rhymes. Hence the word bård meaut also a priest, philosopher, or teacher of any kind. We often find a bard entrusted with the education of a prince, and about three hundred years ago, a Highland chief had seldom any Such was the respect paid other instructor. other instructor. Such was the respect pand to the ancient bards, that, according to Diodorus, the Sicilian, they could put a stop to armies in the heat of battle. After an en-After an engagement they raised the song over the de-ceased, and extelled the heroes who survived.

When a bard appeared in an army, it was either as a herald or ambassador, hence his person and property were sacred in the midst of his enemies and amid their wildest rayages. In earlier times he never bore arms, and Owen asserts that it was unlawful to unsheathe a weapon in his presence. Among the ancient British there were, according to Jones, three orders of bards-the Privardd, (Prìomh-bhàrd) or chief bard: the Poswardd, (Prioma-based) or their bard; the Poswardd, who taught what was set forth by the privardd; and the Arwyddwardd, i.e. the ensign bard, or herald at-arms, who employed himself in genealogy, and in blazoning the arms of princes and nobles, as well as altering them according to their dignity or de-Owen observes that their dress was sky-blue, an emblem of peace.

Among the Irish Celts the bards enjoyed many extraordinary privileges. The chief bard was called Filidh, or Ollamo ri dan, a The chief graduate or doctor in poetry, and had thirty inferior bards as attendants, whilst a bar of the second order had fifteen. The Gael of Scotland was not behind his brother Celts in his veneration for the bards, for they had lands bestowed on them, which became hereditary in their families. A Highland chef retained two bards, who, like those of the Irish, had their retinue of disciples; and though the office did by no means procure the same deep respect as in times of old, yet it was always filled to the utmost. Thereasons for the decline of their power will be found under "aois-dàua."

tween these fires the cattle were driven, to preserve them from contagion till next Mayday. On this day it was usual to extinguish all the hearth fires, in order that they should be re-kindled from this purifying flame. In many parts of the Highlands the young folks of the district used to meet on the moors on of the district used to meet on the moors on 1st. May. They cut a table in the green sod, of a round figure, by cutting a trench in the ground of sufficient circumference to hold the whole company. They then kindled a fire, and dressed a repast of eggs and milk of the consistency of custard. They kneaded a cake of oatmeal, which was toasted at the embers against a stone. After the custard was eaten, they divided the cake into as many portions as there were persons in the company, as much alite as possible in size and shape. much alike as possible in size and They daubed one of the pieces with charcoal till it was black all over, and they were then all put into a bonnet together, and each one, blindfolded, drew out a portion. The bonnet holder was entitled to the last bit. and whoever drew the black bit was the devoted person who was to be sacrificed to Baal, whose favour they meant to implore in redering the year productive. The devoted person was compelled to leap three times over the flames.** with the personal pronouns thus :-

Ist sing, butain, from me, pl. bluain, from us. 2nd. bluain, from the, tunaith, from you 3rd.m. bluaith, from thee, tunaith, from you 3rd.m. bluaith, from him, bhuapa, (m. & f.), f. bluaipe, from her, from them. The forms under o are preferable to these.

[Dr. Gillies says—"The p cf (bluaipe or) uaipe, now used for the fem. form of the 3rd per sing, is both phonetically and histori-cally wrong. The form 'maithe' is fem. in structu. e, and analogous to leithe and rithe, and its use as a masculine prep. pronoun is grossly incorrect. Uaidh (or bhuaidh) is the correct modern form of Old Gaelic uad, from him." Dr. G. is literally right, although custom is against him, and "bhuaipe" from her, being a firmly established form, both in speaking and writing, it is never likely to be altered in the Highlands. To substitute bhuaithe for bhuaine now would cause unnecessary confusion, but bhuaith for him, could be used as easily as bhuaith or bhuaithe, Were the Gaelic language taught in all the schools in the Hizhlands, popular mistakes like this would never get a hold.] "Bio" is used after a vowel or vowel sound, also when it begins a sentence; "o" is used after a pronounced consonant according to choice.

breacan, -ain, pl. -au, [& **-ain] s.m. Highland plaid. 2 Tartan. Parti-coloured cloth was used by the Celts from the earliest times but the variety of colours in the breacan was greater or less, according to the rank of the wearer. That of the ancient kings had seven colours, that of the druids six, and that of the nobles four. In the days of Martin the tartans seemed to be used to distinguish the inhabitants of different districts, and not the members of different families as at present. He expressly says that the inhabitants of the various islands were not all dressed alike, but that the setts and colours of the various tartans varied from isle to isle. As he does not mention the use of a special pattern by each family, it would appear that such a distinction is a modern one, and taken from the ancient custom of a tartan for each district, the family or clan originally most numerous in each part eventually adopting as their distinctive clan tartan the tartan of such dis-Martin's information was not obtaintrics. ed on hearsay, he was born in Skye and reared in the midst of Highland ensioms.

breacanach, a. Tartan, 2 Plaided Aodach breacanach, tactan clothes.

is the original garb of the Highlanders, and formed the chief part of their costume. The breacan in its simple form is now seldom used. It consisted of a plain piece of tartan, two yards in width, and four or six in length. In dressing, this was carefully plaited in the middle, of a breadth suitable to the size of the wearer, and sufficient to extend from one side around his back to the other, leaving as much at each end as would cover the front of the body, overlapping each other. The plaid being thus prepared, was firmly bound round the loins with a leathern belt, in such a manner-that the lower side fell down to the mid-dle of the knee-joint and then, while there were the foldings behind, the cloth was double in front. The upper part was then fas-tened on the left shoulder with a large brooch or pin, so as to display to the best advantage the tastefulness of the arrangement, the two ends being sometimes suffered to hang down, but that on the right side, which was necess arily the longer, was more usually tucked under the belt.—Logan.

ca lleach-an-dùdain, (lit. carlin of the milldust AC Curious character dance, described .as follows in Carmina Gadelica.

95. Caillea ha aneann-dubh.

"It is danced by a man and a woman. The man has a rod in his right hand, variously called slachdan druidheachd, (druidic wan b., and slachdan geasachd, (magic wand.) The man and the woman gesticulate and attitu-dinize before one auother, dancing round and round, in and out, crossing and recrossing, changing and exchanging places. The man flourishes the wand over his own head and over the head of the woman whom he touches with the wand, and who falls down as if dead, at his feet. He berrouns his dead "cerrin," dancing and gestien ating round her body. He then lifts up her left hard, and looking into the palm, breath s upon it, and touches it with the wand. Immediately the limp hand becomes alive, and moves from side to side and up and down. He rejoices and dances round the figure on the floor. Having done the same to the right hand, and to the left and right foot in succ ssion, they also become alive and move. Though the limbs are living, the body is still I'ne man kneels over the wom in and breathes into her mouth and touches her heart with the wand. The woman comes to life, and springs up confronting the man. Then the two dance vigorously and loyously as in the first part. The tune varies with the varying phases of the dance. It is played by a piper or fiddler, or sung as a "portan-beul" mouth-tone) by a looker-on or by the performers themselves. The air is quaint and irregular" and the words which are curious and archaic commence as follows : -"Cailleach an dùdain, dùdain, dù lain.

"Merriment. 5 The arcient Hunhand man-ner of noting classical pipe-music by a com-bination of definite sydables, by which bination of definite sylables, by which means the various tunes could be the more-easily recollected by the learner.
Through the kindness of Chas, Barnatyne Esq., M.B., C.M., Salsburgh, Holylown, we are able to give here the only systematic key to this ameent system of notation for "c olmor" ever published. As MacLeod of Gesto, who published the MacCrimmons' tunes in canntaireachd, took them down phonetically, it is rather difficult to describe the system innucly. This must not be lost sight of in translating tunes. The complete key is one another very closely, but the changes used are indicated, and the pronunciations are given approximately, in brackets. The are given approximately, in brackets. The key note, "low A" is always represented in this notation by in, probably a contraction of "an dara aon," the second one, to distingof "ad data aon, the second me, to uniting uish the key note from the first note of the chanter—low G." "High A" is always a but in a canntaireachd word it is often denoted by a preceding I, thus, I'u, and so confusion is avoided. "Low A" is either in, en, en, or simply n after some notes. The atternatives seem to have been used for the sake of euphony. D note is a and B note is a, but the qualifying effect of the grace notes—"high G" represented by h, and D represented by dor h (the latter a contraction sented by a or h (the latter a contraction of [a] chorag, the finger playing B) prevects any confusion. The note E is represented by i. At the beginning of most of the MacCrimmon tunes and variations is I, which gives the key note. It stands for E (soh)the dominant of the "low A" (doh.) Where it does not occur, the tune will be found to start with a word like hien, which denotes E with with a word like hien, which denotes E with "high G" grace note, and then "low A." The vowel for F note is ie, and it also is always made certain by its grace note d or h.
"High G" is u, often distinguished by a preceding h. "High A" is often vi, to distinguish it from E note. When F succeeds "high A" in a tune, the word is often vie. Regarding grace notes, h, the aspirate, qualifies all notes down to "low A." but often where ha obviously means "B" note, it must be concluded that it should have been written cha. Similarly ho ho should be ho cho. The letter d, is used, as is t, to denote both "high G" and D grace notes, but an examination of the notation word, makes a mistake unlikely, thus, dieliu means F with "high G" grace note, and then "high A" and G. Thi means two E's played with two and G. This means two E's played with two grace notes. T and d resemble each other very closely in Gaelic, but the context in canntaireachd makes it always easy to see whether "high G" grace note or D is meant. It is necessary to explain the compound grace note systems. Dr is doubling of "low G" by a touch of D grace note, drin is doubling of "low G" by a touch of D grace note and open "low A" and so on over the whole scale. The letters dr are obviously a contraction of de uair, "two times" or twice.

Tri means doubling of "low G" by D grace note, and as A is opened, double E by F and E and open E. This is a crumluath form. Two is the same, at first, tut the doubling of E is done with the grips from o or C note. This is "crumluath a mach." These examples will make the rest easy. In many tunes where a tr type occurs, it obviously when translated, should only have been a dr type, this confusion being due to the s milarity of d and t in Gaelic. The shake on "high A" is vivi. The other shakes are represented by rr, according to where the beats or shakes are taken from. This seems to be a contraction of gearr. adh, a shake. A simple touch of a note before opening is always represented by a single r. For instance, such a word as radin signifies that B is to be touched with "low G" (ludge) before opening; din is "low A" with D grace note. Ho radin, is the C note o, with "high G" grace note keeping the ra below D note, also an A note. Rules for the grace note scheme. 1. All grace notes and grace note scheme. 1. All grace notes and grace currently before the notes they embellish. They are appoggiaturas or semi-quaver notes, or accacaturas or demi-semi-quaver notes, which predominate. 2. All grace notes in cannaireachd are represented by consonants. 3. All compound forms are made up by combinations of the compound forms are made up by combinations. ing single forms. 4. All leading or scale notes are represented by vowels. 5. All note forms with m or n in them contain "low A." 6. Grace notes h and d are qualifying or modulating grace notes. 7. Doublings are represented by dr, triplings by tr, compound types by combinations of these 8. Open doublings above D are represented by dir, such as dirie, where the note is doubled by itself and the note above it. Dr donetes glessed with the note above it. Dr denotes closed doublings, dir open doublings.

Grace note forms defined. Grace note forms consist of single, double, and compound The single group includes all simple forms, together with the "da-lugh" variation form. together with the "di-lugh" variation form, The double includes the single and double types of "tri-lugh" and "ceithir-lugh." The single type of tri-lugh is composed of three low A's graced by G, D, and E grace notes, and it precedes the note embellished. An example of this is "thininido," the syllable do being C graced by D. This type is called for aithe or open, and is opposed by the double or closed form, represented by such a word as "hindirinto," The latter is called a stendy or inside, when opposed to a type like a steach or inside, when opposed to a type like "hodorito," which is said to be a mach or outside, as the grips are taken from the note played. The types last named are also breabach forms, having a "kick" note at the fin ish. The crun-lugh or ceithir-lugh forms-are also foscailte, a mach and a steach. The word "hadatri" is a steach, when opposed to "hadatri," which is a mach. "Hiodrata-trirr" is a pure "cliabh-lugh"—the chest or creel of fingers, because every finger on the creet of integers, because every integer of chanter is engaged in some way, either acting or acted on. In bappipe music the variations are all named from the acting fingers, and the old pipers counted their time from and the old pipers contact their than both the number of fingers engaged in the several parts of a tune. "Chin-Irine" may be taken as an example of "leun-lugh," the jump of the fingers. This is low A played by D grace note, then G, doubled by D, low A then opened, and Frapidly opened from it. "hiriri" is an example of a beat form. The càrn, càrna [& cùirn], s.m. Cairn, heap or pile of stones loosely thrown together. 2 Peatbarrow. 3 Book. 4 Sledge, car. [Cairns and barrows are very numerous in the Highliands, Ireland and Wales, as well as parts of Norway, Sweden, and other Continental countries, and there are a few in America. Some of them measure 300 ft. in circumference at the base and 20 ft. in height. They consist of loose stones, and the whole is in the shape of a cone. In many instances where they have been opened, they contained sepulchral urns, which show that they piles consist entirely of earth, and this gave rise to the opinion that stone cairns were intended. tended for malefactors, while those of earth were for the victorious and brave. We learn from ancient authors that malefactors were buried under heaps of stone, and it was a com-mon practice among the Druids to erect carris on spots where criminals had been durint. House "fear air chàrn" meaus an outlaw, "tha e air a chàrn," he is an outlaw, Is oil leam nach robh do luath fo chàrn, I to wish your askes under a cairn, b finear leam a bhi fo chìrn, I ad rather be under a cairn, (i.e. be punished a moutlaw.) The ceremony in later times was continued in the Highlands, but its meaning was dered. A sudden death was bas qui capart, and the dead person's soul was believed to be in the hottest part of purgatory, so every passer by was expected to put a stone on the cairn and to pray for the repose of the soul of the departed hence the saying "currith in clack had chira." I will add a stone to your carn, which betckens a friendly intention and means that one's rememorance shall be kept alive. When the remains of anyone were carried a long distance for interment, and the bearers had to take some rest on the way, a cairn was put up there also, and those who passed by were expected of their charity to put a stone on it, and pray for the soul of the deceased. Cairns are still frequently the deceased. Cairns are still frequently erected to mark the spot in which a funeral

3 Ill-chance, mishap. 4 Unprosperous course.
This term is said by some to have had its origin in Druitical superstition. On certain cccasions they moved three times round their stony eircles or temples. In performing this ceremony they kept the circle on the right ear-deise) and consequently mov-ed from E. to W., this was called the pros-perous course. The car-tuathal, or moving with the circle on the left, was deemed fatal or unprosperous, being contrary to the course of the sun. Car-tuathal t' aimhleis ort! the left-about unlucky turn to you!

120. Cas-chrom. an implement of tillage peculiar to the High-lands, used for turning the ground where a plough cannot work on account of the stony ground. It is of great antiquity, and is described as follows by Armstrong. "It is very inexpeditious in comparison with the plough. eight men being necessary to dig as much with it in one day as a horse would plough in the same time. It is chiefly used for fillage, and consists of a crooked piece of wood, the low-er end somewhat thick, about two-and-a-half feet in length, pretty straight, and armed a the end with iron made thin and square to cut the earth. The upper end of this ins.ru-ment is called the shaft, and the lower, the head. The shaft above the crook is pretty straight, being six feet long, and tapering upwards to the end which is slender. Just below the crook or angle, there must be a hole wherein a strong peg must be fixed, for the workman's right foot in order to push the instrument into the earth; while in the meantime, standing on his left foot, and holding the shaft firmly in both hands, when he has in this manner driven the head for a standing on the standing on the standing or th in this manner driven the head far enough into the earth, with one bend of his body he raises the clod by the iron headed part of the instrument, making use of the heel or hind part of the head as a fulcrum. In so doing, he turns it over always towards the left hand and then proceeds to push for another clod in the same form. To see six or eight men in the same form. To see six or eight men all at work with this instrument, standing all on one leg and pushing with the other, would be a curious sight to a stranger. With all its disadvantages, the cas-chrom is, of all instruments, the fittest for turning up the ground in the country, for among so many rocks a plough can do little or nothing, and where there are no rocks, the earth is generally so marshy that cattle are not able to pass over it without sinking in deeply." It is of pretty general use in the Western Isles, one man being able to turn over more ground with it in a day than four are able to do with a common spade.

cha, negative particle, Not. [Cha aspirates the fut. neg. of a verb, also the initial of words beginning with labials and gutturals, and, in Argulishire, with dentals also, aschadhuin an dorus, the door will not shut; cha dhaor a phris, its price is not high. Cha simply negatives the signification of the verb, simply negatives the signification of the tract, as, (do) bhuail mi, I struck; cha do bhuail mi, I did not strike. It becomes cha'n before initial vowels or f pure, as cha'n blui, I shall not drink; cha'n fhosgail mi, I shall not open.

Dr. Gillies remarks that the n of cha'n in cha'n 'eil, "shows the abiding influence of a lost dental n,—the n doubtless which re-asserts itself before initial vowels—it shows that it is wrong to separate the n of cha'n as is usually done in writing, as cha'n, cha-n and cha n-." [N is not a dental, and the n and cha n." IN is not a dental, and the n has as much right to separation as in gu'n dean. Cha'n is simply aspirated gu'n or co'n, only the aspirating influence is lost. It was no cha'n, and appears again in nach. Cha'n 'eil eadar an t-amadan agus an duine

[The following remarks by J.G.M. concerning the form of the verb in -eas (e.g. cluimeas) should be borne in mind. "In the Gaelic sense is is not subjunctive. The proof is sense in is not subjunctive. that cluinnear ones duty for cluinn, cluinnidh and cluinneas in the so-called Passive. Thus ma, which in active takes -eas, in passive takes cluinnear; an and nach, which in active take cluinn, in passive take cluinnear, and the absolute cluinnidh is represented in passive by chrinnear. The so-called passive is really an impersonal form e.g. tillear air ais, he returns home. How can an intransitive verb have a passive voice? for instance, come, one cannot say I was comed, yet in Gaclic we have, cha tipear as eu, mhais na pivo a moire, "cannot be comed without the pipes." The Gaelic mind s conception of the subjunctive mood certainly does not cover the same ground as in English. Again, bluntar, people were not prove were dor was'd) If ciuinwar is passive, : 0 is bhatar.' teluinneach, -ich, s.m. Miner.

NAMES OF EAR-MARKS ON SHEEP:—

1 Toll—hole made in the centre of ear.—

hole.

Barr-top out off the ear-tip, crop. Roibeadh-Slit made downwards from the top of ear-Lewis,-slit. Sgoltadh

(AH)—Argyll—split. Stilleag - Top cut off in the form of a with the apex downwards - "eal stob," fork ; swallow-tail .- Lewis. Smedrach (AH)-A gyll.

Geagan-triangular piece taken from top of the ear-cut.

Beum-semicircular piece taken from under-side of ear-hind-bit. - Lewis. Beum fo chluais(AH), beum culaoibh (DM) back-nin.

Gearradh cròcan-Slit taken diagonally upwards at the side of the ear.

Gearradh-slit made at the side, across the ear.

Slisium, cas,-slice taken from the side of the ear.

Amaladh-dovetail-shaped piece, taken 10 from the side of the ear.

An t-snathad-slit made in the centre of ear by bending or doubling the ear lengthwise and cutting down, leaving a tongue like that of a net-needle, from which it takes its name.

12 Bacan ard, (AH) the fore, or upper half of barr cut off-fore-quarter -Argyll.
-high-notch (DM.)

Bacan iosal, (AH) hind, or lower half of barr cut off-hind-quarter-Argyll. -lo v-notch (DM.)

Beum os cionn na cluaise, (AH) Semi-circular piece taken from upper side of ear, like No. 6 on under side—fore-bit.

Beum heulaoibh, (DM) fore-nip.

Cas-chaibe, piece taken from side of ear shaped like a cas-chom(DU)—Gairloch. In Argyll, this mark is taken from the top of the ear, so that when the mark barr is made, cas-chaibe disappears— (DM) spade-shaft.

Da-sgoltadh, (DM) two parallel slits made downwards from top of ear-two splits-Argyll.

Dà-bheum, (DM) [like No. 6 duplicated] -two nips.

Beum mhéirleich, varies. If a sheep-stealer cuts off a cas-chaibe mark, the ear will then be like one marked bàrr. When lower marks than cas-chaibe have to be removed, a larger part of the ear is cut off, leaving only a stump.

In Levis, the marks 1 to 9 are the old earmarks, known as "na naoidh deargadh."

Nos. 10 & 11 are of modern origin—(MMD)

The "near" ear, is "cluas ehi," or "cluas a' ghlacaidh;" the "far" ear, "cluas dheas."

By combinations of these marks, and the use of either or both ears, a practically endless variety may be obtained.

There are some who put age-marks on their sheeps' ears,—oue nip for one-year-old, two nips for two-year-old, and so on up to five-year-old, when the marking ceases—(DM.)

We are indebted to MMcD for names above, against which no references are given.

When a witch desired to destroy any one to whom she had an ill-will, she often made a corpse of clay resembling the unfortunate one, and placed it in some out-of-the-way burn under a precipice, in such a way that the water trickled slowly on it. As the clay body wasted so the live body of the person it resembled was also supposed to waste away. Were the body found, it was carefully preserved, and so the spell of the witch was broken. Sometimes pins were stuck in the clay body to make the death of the doomed one more painful. Several such bodies have been found, even of erann-nan-gad, s. m. Kind of plough, seldom used now, though at one time common enough, especially in the Western Isles. The parish of Barvas is the only part of Lewis where it is still used. It is usually drawn by one horse, though two can be used. From its construction it is especially suited to the stony ground of the crofts, and its gradual disappearance is a cause of great regret, as there is no other implement, equally convenient to take its place. It possesses a great advantage over the common iron plough, in that, as the point runs along the ground be-hind the horse, it serves the two-fold purpose of keeping the plough steady, and when the share comes in contact with a stone, by lifting the handle, or lamb-chrann upwards like a lever, the share and sock can be lifted clear of the ob-truction. The ploughman uses only one hand, and walks on the left side of the implement, instead of behind, as is now usual in ploughing.

A Coll priest of former times was accustomed to drive recalcitrant natives to church by a smart application of his walking stick, those who yielded were thus said to come under "creideamh-a'-bhata-bhuidhe." Another version says Hector son bluidhe." Another version says Hector, son of Donald Maclean of Coll, was the one who applied the yellow stick. Hector was laird in 1715, and as the religion of the yellow stick was introduced into Rum in 1726, it is beyond dispute that Hector was the author, or propagator of it. He was dignified in appearance and stern in manners, and could no doubt wield the yellow stick gracefully and with efficiency.

dair (darach, oak) the fourth letter of the Gaelat the commencement of a word often give it opposite meanings, as, daor, dear; saor,

D has various sounds: (1) Broad-more dental, e.g. more explosive than in English, dental, e.g. more explosive than in English, and with the tip of the tongue right up to the teeth, as in dan, a song; duine, a man; dlagh, a handful, (2) Snall like g in genius, when fanked by a small vowel (e, or i,) that is when small vowels are the nearest to it, as, faide, Longth; ceaird, u trade, (3) D after ch sounds like k in English, thus lockd is pronounced locks, the combination chd is thus the exact equivalent of final or medial c. (Boc, a buck, and boohd, poor, sound exactly the same.)

(4) Dh, when broad, is very soft and resembles a soft English g. Thus, MacDhonnachuidh, a song Duncan, usually Englished as Robertson, has also crapt into English as MacConachy. MacDhuibhidh, a Davidson, has also achy. MacDhuibhidh, a Davidson, has also it in metre, heen Englished as MacKay, so that some sup-d'a, (for do a) To his or its. Chaidh e dt pose that it was the MacKays who fought at the North Inch of Perth, whereas a disc knowledge of Gaelic would have shown that it was the Davidsons. it was the Davidsons. As a final, beard dis-usually gets its full value in promuneration, thus, 0th was practically the force of 0 only, as in Loen Odha, the best English representa-tion of which is Loehow. Odha, a greaution, is well known in Lowand Scots as of Portnar, As a final, broad da is veri known in howanni Scots as de Boullar, dun-coloured; modh, polichness; erodh, cutter, are practically pronounce a hour, ohr, naou and coor. In Sky, however, moome words, as, fiednot, fieddae, the odh gets as full value. Adm when medial, as in advarc, a known daddown deliver, a feet of the colour scots. horn; cladhach, digning; sounds as though the speaker cheesed or interrupted his oreacning, besides which, the first a is sounded like ac. (5) Dh, when narrow, sounds like lingistary, as, dueth, of him; thi, off her, through yea, ye.) When final, as, in bundith, scale strike; faidh, a prophet; aghaidh, face; it has the same y sound, except in 18kge, Midl, and some other parts, where a final idh is pronounced almost as it written ich. Dh tellowest by her when a major sound to there in Rose. the speaker cheesed or interrupted his oreata amose as it written ch. On fellowed by or r, has no sunitar sound to them in English. The nearest approach to explaining it is to say that it is much softer than the soft est English g, as in, a dhlighe, his right; dhuidth did powtrate, did impress.

In Old Gaelic the article sometimes ended in d. In Skye that d of the article has sometimes been retained before fh, as, an d fhàidhe, of the prophet; and sometimes the d is absent, as, an fhir, of the man. This d is absent, as, an time, of the man. In a appears with great irregularity in connection with feminine nouns, as, an d-inois, the rest; an d-fh-irge, the sea. Traces of d before inan d-fhairge, the sea. Traces of d before initial vowels as in the old language, also occur. that yowels as in the old language, also occur, as, ceann and aigh, the heiter's heat; sighthan air an d-athar, clouds on the sky. If he, kill, in Skye has none sing, an t-time gene de data and d-fheile. "Dobrran donn and sruth" is another example. We do not know the precise circumstances under which this d of the article appears.

The n of cha'n frequently becomes d before verbs beginning with t, especially irregular ones, thus, cha d'thoir, cha d'thir, cha d'ocid, which are usually thus spelt, should be che dtoir, cha dtig, cha dteid. This is called the eclipsis of t. D can also suffer eclipsis, as, as dh' aindeoin, in spite of, (pron. a ganyon.) Nan damh is pronounced nan annh in many parts of the North, is endar dhomh, I must, is also sometimes contracted is endar 'omh. (for iad) They, them. Ni'd gandeachas. Ni 'd gàirdeachas, dhain apparatus a houn following, as, da dhuine, two men; the thaigh, two houses; da satigadear, two soldiers. Da governs a noun following it in the datt, song, and the adjective qualifying that noun in the n. sing, Jem. The dative so-called is really the accusative of the old dual number in such an expressof the old dual number in such an expression as, chumnaic mi & choich, I save two somes, and an properly speaking has no governing influence. The nom dual fem was like the dative singular, and the genitive dual was like the genitive singular. For all practical modern purposes, however, it will be easiest for beginners to follow the rule as usually expressed, and put a noun following an in the aut. when, and its qualifying adjection as the control of th the in the accession, and issignativing acyce-tive in the none sing, from Da initiano (better dishis bhan) two women; dà sheachdain, two weeks; da chaol-cuu, two yaunt hounds; cò an dà lunntaire mhor seo? who are these two great bons? dà fhear dheug is piobaire, twelve men and a piper (nere deny is an adj. to jear); an da inhuaoi m..or, the two big women. This curious government gives way upon occasion, when other inducaces are too powerful, as, bunn me dhà bhrò.ge, the soles of my two shors; Frum on and a fineth, the running of the day of the two deer—said of people with divided aims; rudha uan the galeann deug, the promontory of the twelve glens; is e coslas da basan-unsal a th' ann, it seems to be two ladies; is chine coir tear da bho, the men who has two coas is a decent man. When used ansoutely, e.g. without a noun, da becomes a dha, as, tha a dna agam, I have two; a muas a dna dhimba, oring down two of them. When combining with deug, ten, and no noun being expressed, it is both aspirated and aspirating, as, aon ono a bhriseas an garadh, agus a dia dheng a teunas, one cow breass the dyke, and a dozen leap it. When used to express multiplicity, a dhà uiread agus ..., twice as much as, is said; there the a, and the aspirate in tha are the sign of the old possessive masculine or neuter, used proleptically. The literal meaning, therefore, is, its twice as much as.,]

is a uniform system of land denomination consisting of dai hachs, plough, ates and oxgangs, each dablach consisting of four ploughgates, and each ploughgate containing eight oxgangs. As soon as we cross the great chain of mountains separating the eastern from the westtains separating the castern from the western waters, we find a different system equally uniform. The ploughgates and oxyangs disappear, and in their piace we find dabnachs, and pennylands. The portion of land termed a daohach, is here also carled a tiring, or ounce-tand, and each dabhach contains 20 pennylands." Prof. MacKinnon in Place and Personal Names of Argyll, says "In Protland the unit of land measure was the dabhach, a word which require deprice a liquid mass. word which properly denotes a liquid measure. An old farmer in Western Gaeldom fresure. An old farmer in Western Gaeldom frequently speaks of his fields, not as containing so many acres of land, but as "the sowing of so many bolis of oats," "the bed of so many barrels of potatoes," &c. Accordingly, from a measure of capacity, dabhach came early to be used as a measure of land surface. In Gaeldom, where the arable land is scart and scattered, the variations in the acreage of par-ticular dabhachs or concess must have been very great, still the extent of land represented by these terms seems to have been, as a rule, about 104 Scots acres, or 120 English acres.
